CAITLIN WHYTE

QUICK BIO

Caitlin Whyte is a current audio producer, former news reporter, and millennial making podcasts.

Her love of audio and sound started early, majoring in Audio / Radio Production & Broadcast Management at SUNY Plattsburgh in Northern New York.

This passion brought her to Western Alaska, where she worked as the Weekday Morning Show Host for KNOM Radio and all the way back home to NPR member station WXXI News in Rochester, New York where she was the Weekend Edition Host and a reporter for three years.

She now spends her days as a Podcast Host & Producer at DoctorPodcasting, a podcast production hub for hospitals & medical professionals, as well as taking on freelance clients of her own.

SOME OF MY FAVORITE PROJECTS:

- I Am A Rural Teacher Podcast: Melissa Hyman in Hartford, VT
- WXXI News: Artists Unlimited productions are a family affair for many \(3-part radio series\)
- WXXI News: Urban farming cultivates a sense of ownership over food
- Owl Have You Know Podcast from Rice Business: A Dope Platform for Everyday Women feat. Raisha Smith '22
